The disclosure is objected to because of the following informalities: page 6, lines 10-13 are incorrect for the reason that the outer peripheral edge 11a doesn't appear to be corrugated when seen in horizontal direction as shown in Fig. 2C.

Appropriate correction is required.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-3 and 9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Gentry in view of Witmer.

With respect to claim 1, Gentry discloses a packaging container molded of a synthetic resin sheet (see paragraph [0017] )having an opening (defined at the upper end of the sidewall 14), the container comprising a flange (rim 16) projecting outwardly from the opening, the flange is provided throughout with regularly distributed minute projections (the uppermost portion or crest of the waves 20) or minute recesses (the lowermost portion or trough of the waves 20) and an outer peripheral edge of the flange forms a vertically (the wave pattern of the outer peripheral edge extends in a vertical direction) corrugated edge (see Fig. 1 and 3-6) defined by a line crossing the projections or recesses (this outer peripheral edge line is substantially circular and has the wave pattern, this line is perpendicular to the ridge and groove lines formed by the projections and recesses, respectively). Gentry discloses the projections or recesses arranged in a pattern of a single row with numerous columns. Gentry discloses the invention except for the pattern having at least two rows. Witmer teaches a plate with a flange a pattern of projections (15, 15a) or recesses (16, 16a), the projections or recesses are arranged in a pattern of at least two rows and at least two columns. It would have been obvious to modify the arrangement of the projections and recesses of Gentry by adding another row of projections or recesses or both to Gentry's flange and to align the added row so that the projections or recesses align in columns in order to add rigidity to the flange, eliminate or reduce flexing of the flange and resist bending of the flange so that when the container is grasped and lifted by the flange the flange doesn' t bend.

With respect to claims 2 & 3, Gentry discloses a waveform of a vertically corrugated edge with a difference (amplitude of the waveform) within the range of not more than 0.5 mm as the stated 11 mils, 17 mils, 16 mils and 18 mils (see paragraphs [0026-0028]) are all within this range. Gentry fails to disclose the stated pitch or wavelength dimensions of a waveform of a vertically corrugated edge, a pitch being not being more than 1.0 mm. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to configure the pitch of the waveform as such, since it has been held that discovering an optimum value of a result effective variable involves only routine skill in the art. In re Boesch, 617 F.2d 272,205 USPQ 215 (CCPA 1980). Reducing the pitch or wavelength of Gentry with the same diameter of the bowl will effectively increase the total number of waveforms by a factor greater than 2.5 which will increase the reinforcing effect of the waveforms and enhance the bowl's overall strength.

Re claim 9, the outer peripheral edge of Gentry is not being modified. The outer peripheral edge of the flange of Gentry includes alternating minute projections and minute recesses.

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-3 and 9 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
